NYPD Police Protect CBR Expressive Rights in New York City

by Gregg Cunningham

On Saturday, May 4, CBR joined Focus on the Family's Times Square event in New York City. Focus staff members were decidedly unhappy to see our abortion photo signs because they continue to help Planned Parenthood hide the horror of abortion. Two Focus personnel told us they did not want us displaying abortion imagery near their event. The First Amendment ensures that no organization has the authority to censor our display, and because NYPD's excellent officers know the law, they backed us up.

This gathering featured Abby Johnson and the actress who played her in the movie "Unplanned." But instead of the film's simulated abortions, we showed thousands of passersby what abortions really look like. We would be making much faster progress against abortion if major pro-life organizations would stop making their events mere pep rallies. They should show the truth and educate those who attend in effective strategies to stop the killing. If they won't, we will.

On Monday, May 6, we displayed the face of infanticide advocate Governor Andrew Cuomo beside a photo of a late-term aborted baby girl, at Fordham University in the Bronx.

Governor Cuomo is notoriously known for a Capitol Press Room radio interview in which he stated that pro-lifers have no place

At this gate to Columbia University, CBR staff members Maggie Ferrara and Mik'aela Raymond stand as witnesses against abortion. CBR Director Gregg Cunningham was standing near Miss Raymond when an angry, apparently gay, male student approached us with his friends. They failed in their effort to discredit us so they stormed off.

At New York University, students and staff were stunned to see our prenatal development and abortion photo signs. A nearby park provided a constant flow of student and non-student pedestrian traffic.

in New York. <http://bit.ly/2QuKNHe> . He again raised the ire of many in New York and beyond when he signed the infanticide bill into law on the anniversary of Roe v. Wade this past January 22. A video of this diabolical bill passing in the New York Senate shows brazen cheering and thunderous applause from the abortion/infanticide supporters. <http://bit.ly/2X5ZVxf> . A photo of Cuomo signing the bill into law depicts him surrounded by gleeful faces (think demonic glee). <http://bit.ly/2YRzcl>

Cuomo then celebrated this abominable "Reproductive Health Act" by lighting up the Empire State Building, the Freedom Tower, and the Alfred E. Smith Building in Albany in pink lights.

In front of Columbia University, African-American Pastor Clenard Childress, Jr. (CBR Board Member) and his New Jersey church helped with our outreach each day.

New York police confronted the man who vandalized our signs with a black marker.

We realized it was imperative that we show New Yorkers the reality of abortion, and that is why we planned this tour.

Despite Fordham University being a Jesuit Catholic school, many passersby were very angry at our presence.

Our display then moved to New York University in Manhattan on May 6. One angry passerby attacked our “All Black Lives Matter, Born and Unborn” sign with a permanent marker. I had a remarkable conversation with a third-year law student but I was dismayed by how ignorant (but stubborn) she was. If she is a typical student, the legal profession is headed for trouble.

On Wednesday we exhibited our anti-infanticide display at Columbia University, again in Manhattan. Columbia regards itself to be America’s preeminent school of journalism and student reaction to our signs helped explain why the news media is so corrupt. I did, however have a thoughtful 20-minute discussion with a professor of public policy.

On Thursday we set up outside the New York Stock Exchange in an effort to reach some of the most influential policy makers in the world. It is safe to say that Wall Street had never seen such graphically disruptive imagery and many passersby seemed stunned.

We ended our New York expedition back near Times Square outside Fox News which is located in the News Corp. Building. The New York police sent out their “Counter-Terrorism” officers

This angry professor (middle background) confronted us outside Fordham University, shrieking an oft-heard phrase, “I’m Jewish – how dare you use photos of the Holocaust?” CBR Director Gregg Cunningham remarked to him that the Holocaust pictures are the moral property of people of conscience everywhere, whether Jew or Gentile. The professor stormed off.

Many who walked by our display on Wall Street wore business suits. Our message was to show them that there are more important things than money. Many seemed taken aback as they are not accustomed to seeing pro-life activists in their realm.

but they were respectful and in some instances, even helpful. Over all, we were impressed by the professionalism of the NYPD. Gov. Cuomo has declared that there is no place in New York for opponents of abortion, but with your help, we proved him wrong. We aren't going to allow any public official to advocate infanticide and then tell us we have no right to call him out for promoting such atrocities.

Outside Fordham University, this 4-Year-Old boy and his Grandma saw our signs. She exclaimed as she pointed to her grandson, "He was born at 24 weeks, like the baby on the sign!" At this location were three very busy bus stops, providing a steady stream of people to see our signs.

Our Thursday display was at the New York Stock Exchange.

Thank you for your faithful support and prayers.

College student reached through AbortionNo.org

In Times Square, passersby took photos of our display. Focus on the Family demanded that CBR keep our abortion photos away from their “Unplanned” movie pep rally. We politely refused.
