"Cool" Exhibit at Glendale Community College

A female student at Glendale Community College said, "This is so gross, but it's cool," when she saw CBR's prenatal science display on February 20, 2025. Although her choice of words were somewhat odd, it was apparent that this student was moved by the beautiful photographs of living preborn babies. This college in Glendale, Arizona, has many students who are responsive to our huge photo displays on their campus. The display does not reference abortion, but it educates viewers about the crisis in maternal-fetal health in the U.S. The CDC and American College of OB/GYN's are both writing about the abysmal statistics which show that outcomes for babies and their mothers are much worse than other industrialized countries. We can make a difference through this educational project, thus saving more lives. By showing the beauty and humanity of preborn children, many pregnant women will reject abortion and choose to protect their babies.

This Glendale Community College student took time to read the information on the display about prenatal science and maternal-fetal health.

The new prenatal science display of twenty 7-foot-high columns makes quite an impression at Glendale Community College and other recent venues where it has been set up.

The Most Awesome Display I've Ever Seen

During our new prenatal science display at Arizona Christian College, a female student was heard saying, “This is the most awesome display I’ve ever seen.” The new display is truly spectacular with photos of living babies in the womb from five weeks through nine months, as well as highly detailed artistic pictures of human embryos from weeks one through four. (The columns can be purchased by anyone from www.ERF.science.)

We had a warm welcome on this Christian campus in Glendale, Arizona, on March 17, 2025. The student and faculty reaction to the display was so positive. The chaplain came to see the twenty 7-foot columns and was impressed enough to give his card to CBR Executive Director Gregg Cunningham. The wife of the university president said our project is exciting and wants us to help a student start a new pro-life club.

CBR must take our prenatal and abortion photo displays to Christian venues. The statistics regarding Christians having abortions are shocking. A 2023 study of 1,093 churchgoers found: “One out of every six regular churchgoers in the United States has had, paid for or encouraged an abortion, while one-fifth doesn’t believe the Bible identifies when life begins, a new study suggests.” <https://bit.ly/4iPE8Dk> We understand that some of those abortions took place before churchgoers became Christians, but not all.

Pastors rarely preach about abortion, according to a 2019 Pew Research Center analysis. Pew found “that just 4% of sermons shared on U.S. church websites in the spring of 2019 discussed abortion even once – and when they did, it was rarely mentioned repeatedly. Still, pastors who broached the topic were nearly unanimous in their opposition.” Few U.S. sermons mention abortion, though discussion varies by religion, congregation size. <https://bit.ly/4iCSEyE>

T-shirts with photos of preborn babies were given to students who agreed to wear them on campus. They became “walking billboards” to draw more students to see the display. We trust that many babies will be saved from abortion as a result of our time on campus.

Above: A group of male students study the prenatal science display at Arizona Christian University (ACU) on March 17. The small signs to the right of the path are Bible verses related to the sanctity of life.

Right: ACU students read the scientific information on the columns, and QR codes are on each column to provide more data.

Armed Robbers Stole CBR Abortion Video in Ghana

This surprising email arrived March 17, 2025, from J.D., a minister of Calvary Hill Church of Christ in Tarkwa, Ghana:

You sent some abortion DVDs to me in 2010 or 2011, which I showed publicly in many communities and churches to educate people to stop abortion. It was very effective. I used scriptures to support the campaign to stop abortion. However, I lost the DVD to armed robbers when I was attacked on my way to preach the gospel in some communities in northern Ghana.

I, therefore, wish to make a humble request for another copy of the video ...

We gladly responded with a hearty “Yes!” and we are sending J.D. three more DVD’s. It would be interesting to know if the robbers watched the CBR abortion video, and if it changed their opinions on abortion! Pray for this faithful servant of the Lord as he travels around Ghana.

Updates from CBR-UK

We are pleased to report that CBR-UK has a new outreach team in the Thames Valley region. They are now out on the streets, wearing their official educator vests, and showing the public photographic evidence about abortion and prenatal development. Here is a recent “short” video the team made while in Oxford: <https://bit.ly/4bSoSU0> The CBR-UK volunteer ended her video description of the photo sign display by quoting CBR Founder and Executive Director Gregg Cunningham: “You can’t change public policy until you change public opinion.”

In another recent short video, CBR-UK shows a sign ruined by an angry pro-abortion in Liverpool. <https://bit.ly/4kQGxQ2> We need your prayers for God’s protection on our teams around the world.

Let us show the love of God by warning against the sin of abortion.

“You must always serve the Lord completely. You must fear him...you must warn the people not to sin against the Lord. If you don’t, the Lord will be angry with you...”

Notes from Supporters

“Having the Genocide Awareness Project (GAP) come to my campus at Washington State University in 2019 changed my life forever. Seeing the aborted baby photos from CBR catalyzed me into forming Tiny Heartbeat Ministries – which the Lord has used to save a number of babies from abortion. On behalf of all these lives impacted including my own, thank you.” Andrew Kerin

March 2025

During the Arizona March for Life on March 15, this CBR photo truck drove in the vicinity and increased the impact of the March. Prenatal photos were on one side, and a 10-week aborted baby is on this side.
